

#AndMeToo Project

Since 1985, the Barbra Schlifer Commemorative Clinic has provided services to more than 70,000 women who have experienced violence. Since the #MeToo movement, the Barbra Schlifer Clinic has seen an increase in women who are experiencing sexual assault or sexual harassment in the workplace.

The #AndMeToo Project seeks to increase access to justice for precariously employed women who have experienced sexual assault or sexual harassment in their workplace. Through the project, the Clinic provides women with access to summary legal advice, brief services and appropriate referrals to services for their legal matters.

This program is for survivors of sexual violence or harassment in the workplace, particularly those facing multiple forms of discrimination, who come from underserved communities, and who have complex socio-economic and legal needs, including:

- Non-status & immigrant women
- Survivors of gendered economic coercion including human trafficking
- Black women
- Indigenous women
- HIV+ women
- Women living with disabilities
- Trans women, gender non-conforming & non-binary people
- Women with overlapping child custody, immigration, housing and employment needs

This program is for workers who are precariously employed. Precarious employment includes:

- Being paid in cash
- Workers with employer-specific work permits
- Temporary agency workers
- Seasonal workers or casual workers
- Working on a term or contract
- Self-employed or independent contractors
- Working multiple jobs
- Working part-time
- Working for low wages
- Unemployment
- Working as a student or a volunteer
